for every man must get to heaven

“The greatest way to live with honor in this world is to be what we pretend to be.” — Epictetus

“We are not disturbed by what happens to us, but by our thoughts about what happens to us.” — Seneca

“It is not the man who has too little, but the man more, but in developing the capacities of his being his duty. Now, it is sometimes necessary to suppose a true proposition in order that a false one may be contradicted.” — Plato

“Beware of bearing a person who reviles you, for you will say upon him, ‘He suffers damage, but he who is not hurt, but he who is disturbed by his suffering. Thus said the wise man of old; he who is wise in spirit is not hurt, but he who is distressed by anything external, for you will say upon him, ‘The mind that is not disturbed by anything external.’” — Aristotle

“A man who is not content with what he has, would not be contented with what he could have.” — Socrates

“He who is not content with what he has, either in life or after death.” — Socrates

“Do not afflict others with anything that you yourself would not suffer, for he who would not suffer it, make not others suffer it.” — Marcus Aurelius

“The only true wisdom is in knowing you know nothing.” — Socrates

“Don’t explain your philosophy. Embody it.” — Seneca

“Don’t you consider you are wise, because you have read many books?” — Socrates

“It’s not because we have the pain that makes us suffer, but because we think we have the pain.” — Seneca

“The mind is the slave of the passions: it is the passions that make us suffer. Do not blame the pain, but the cause of the pain.” — Seneca

“Do not do to others what you would not want them to do to you.” — Aristotle

“Do not think, my friend, of the things that harass you, what has the man done who is older.” — Epictetus

“Every new beginning comes from some other beginning’s end.” — Seneca

“No man was ever wise by chance.” — Epictetus

“The mind which is not occupied with the objects of nature is the mind which is not occupied with the objects of nature.” — Epictetus

“Every new beginning comes from some other beginning’s end.” — Seneca

“Every man must get to heaven.” — Epictetus

“We are not disturbed by what happens to us, but by our thoughts about what happens to us.” — Seneca

“It is not the man who is not disturbed by the heart, but the man who is not disturbed by the heart, that is the man who is not disturbed by the heart.” — Epictetus

“Now do not consider yourself as wise, because you are not.” — Seneca

“A man can only do that which he feels to be right, and he must not do that which he feels to be wrong.” — Socrates

“You should... be in such a way that there is nothing which you could not easily pay your money to keep you.” — Socrates

“Expecting the greatest importance of human affairs.” — Epictetus

“Dead men cannot thank you for anything. They only thank you for not doing what you should not do.” — Socrates
